National Diversity and Conflict: The Role of Social Attitudes and Beliefs

By

Nailah Ayub

1- Nationality is one of the salient and influential characteristics of a nationally diverse workgroup. (this thesis)

2- Contact in diverse groups can improve communication, but social distancing and negative stereotyping will allow little contact. (this thesis)

3- Relationships remain positive and even more intimate as long as social distances are maintained and acknowledged. (this thesis)

4- Nationalism is a fast-held attitude that develops through years of direct and indirect learning. Group composition may alter the effects of nationalism where composition has a significant effect based on how group members perceive each other. (this thesis)

5- Respect even if you dislike, and you will be respected even if disliked. (this thesis)

6- Any conflict is good if it leads to positive consequences.

7- Diversity and conflict can be positive or negative, attitudes make the difference.

8- Material progression without moral contemplation is catastrophic regression.

9- Lack of opportunities decreases the level of motivation.

10- The pour of information through media is adding to the uncertainty and disinformation.
