University of California Humanities Research Institute

Multi-year Research Initiative on Islam and Muslims

This initiative stems from a series of individual meetings held in 1995-96 between the Director of the Humanities Research Institute (HRI) and the President of the nine universities of the University of California system, Professors of the humanities and social sciences faculties of the nine universities of the University of California system, Professors in different disciplines who have an interest in Islamic movements, the ethnic and national identities of Muslims, and the development of Islam in the United States and throughout the world by examining the religion and its diverse expressions and practices; the global politics of Islamic movements; the ethical and national identities of Muslims, ethnic and national identities of Muslims, and the development of Islam in the United States and throughout the world by examining the religion and its diverse expressions and practices; the global politics of Islamic movements; the ethical and national identities of Muslims, ethnic and national identities of Muslims, and the development of Islam in the United States and throughout the world by examining the religion and its diverse expressions and practices; the global politics of Islamic movements; the ethical and national identities of Muslims, ethnic and national identities of Muslims, and the development of Islam in the United States and throughout the world by examining the religion and its diverse expressions and practices; the global politics of Islamic movements; the ethical and national identities of Muslims, ethnic and national identities of Muslims, and the development of Islam in the United States and throughout the world by examining the religion and its diverse expressions and practices; the global politics of Islamic movements; the ethical and national identities of Muslims, ethnic and national identities of Muslims, and the development of Islam in the United States and throughout the world by examining the religion and its diverse expressions and practices; the global politics of Islamic movements; the ethical and national identities of Muslims, ethnic and national identities of Muslims, and the development of Islam in the United States and throughout the world by examining the religion and its diverse expressions and practices; the global politics of Islamic movements; the ethical and national identities of Muslims, ethnic and national identities of Muslims, and the development of Islam in the United States and throughout the world by examining the religion and its diverse expressions and practices; the global politics of Islamic movements; the ethical and national identities of Muslims, ethnic and national identities of Muslims, and the development of Islam in the United States and throughout the world by examining the religion and its diverse expressions and practices; the global politics of