The events of September 11 and their aftermath brought with them the ‘discovery’ of Al-Jazeera by much of the world, due to its coverage of the war. The Arab-speaking world had known Al-Jazeera for a number of years, but its recent coverage of the events in Afghanistan had marked the beginning of its ascent as a major player in the Arab world.

Al-Jazeera is an independent channel, specializing in news, political debates and documentary programmes. It has managed to achieve success and popularity due to its ability to offer a fresh perspective and a different view of the world. Al-Jazeera has been able to attract a broad audience, including both Arabs and non-Arabs, thanks to its innovative programming, its use of technology and its commitment to impartiality.
