World Value Survey (2010-2014).

Appendices

Appendix 1: Ethical Approval

The research project was reviewed by the Human Subjects Research Review Office (HSRRC) of Bingham University under Protocol Number: 3389-14 and Protocol title: Liberal norms and support for war in comparative cross-regime perspective: evaluating the presence and influence of liberal norms.

The project has received an expedited approval pursuant to the Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) regulations, 45 CFR 46.110(7).

Experiments were conducted, in all countries, following the above mentioned regulations.

Dear participant,

This survey is part of a study run by Femke Avtalyon-Bakker, a PhD candidate from Leiden University in the Netherlands. This survey is for academic purposes only. This is not a marketing study; nor is it a test of your knowledge. There are no right or wrong answers. Your answers will be registered without using identifiable information and cannot be connected to your identity in any way. Completing the study should take about 10-15 minutes.

What do you have to do?

The survey consists of two parts:

1. On the next page you will find a story about two countries. These countries are completely fictitious, but you are asked to imagine that you have lived your whole life in one of these countries—simply called “My Country.” Imagine then that you are an advisor to the government of My Country. After carefully reading the story, please answer the questions that follow the story. Please make your judgment on the basis of the information provided in the story and remember that it is a fictional story. If needed, you can look back at the story when answering the questions.

2. The second section poses a series of questions about your personal views on a few different topics. Please answer honestly about your personal opinions and preferences. Again, your answers will not be linked to your identity in any way.

If you have any questions about this study, please contact Femke Avtalyon-Bakker at f.e.avtalyon@fsw.leidenuniv.nl

Thank you for your participation!
Imagine that you have lived your entire life in My Country, a neighboring state of Other Country. My Country and Other Country together form a large island in the Island region of The Ocean, about 130 miles off the continent. The countries are very similar to each other in population and territory size, economic and military power and rely on their own resources, as evidenced below:

This area is of great importance to the world because one of the world's largest concentrations of uranium (which forms the basis for nuclear power) is located near the shores of these countries. Both countries own several uranium fields and have agreed to exploit these fields only for peaceful purposes (such as nuclear energy and medical use). There is, however, one large uranium field with contested borders (please see the map) that is the source of disputes between My Country and Other Country.

been held every 4 years, and all adult citizens may choose their representatives for the national government. The citizens of Other Country feel that they are able to hold their representatives responsible for their policies and actions.

The state of Other Country does not have control over the media outlets (public and commercial TV & radio, newspapers, the internet) and does not monitor the internet and social media.

If citizens have concerns about public matters, they have the right to voice them publicly and may come together in groups to protest. Large-scale protests are allowed, as long as these are peaceful.

The citizens of Other Country also feel that they can say whatever and be whomever they want, without fearing repercussions from the state or society.

irregular basis, but the composition of the national government does not really change. The citizens of Other Country do not feel that they can hold their representatives responsible for their policies and actions.

The state of Other Country controls all media outlets (TV & Radio, two newspapers, the internet) and monitors the internet and social media when representatives of the state believe it is in the best interest of the country to do so.

If citizens have concerns about public matters, they have to report to the National Security Offices to get permission to protest, which is granted only sporadically. Large-scale protests usually lead to numerous arrests.

The citizens of Other Country do not feel free to say whatever or be whomever they want without fear of repercussions from the state or society.

At the moment, the country you live in (My Country) is caught up in a heated conflict with Other Country. The conflict is about these issues:

Two days ago, the political leaders of Other Country publicly accused My Country of delivering false evidence about nuclear weapons plans, expelled My Country’s ambassador, and pulled back their own diplomatic staff. Other Country has threatened to stop all trade payments. However, the borders remain open to all traffic, and trade vessels continue to reach the port of My Country without restrictions. Intelligence evidence shows that Other Country has not made any attempts to mobilize its army and has refrained from holding military exercises. The threat to My Country still seems relatively low.

Yesterday was the last meeting in which an attempt was made to negotiate a settlement between My Country and Other Country. However, they have been unable to settle their differences. The negotiators for My Country left yesterday’s negotiations with the strong impression that Other Country is not going to alter its position and informed the leaders of My Country that Other Country might pose a serious danger to the safety of My Country.
The leaders of My Country have been discussing the matter over the last 24 hours and have called you in to give advice. The government sees two possible courses of action:

A. Force: To attack Other Country in defense of My Country with a pre-emptive strike that will seize the Capital city and the main port of Other Country in order to force Other Country to resolve the conflict.

B. Diplomacy: To return and continue the negotiations with Other Country until the conflict is resolved.

At the request of My Country’s leaders, please answer the questions below, choosing the answer that fits best with your personal views regarding how the conflict should be handled.

Question 1:

What do you advise the government of My Country to do?

[ ] Attack (pre-emptive strike)  [ ] Negotiate further
Question 2:
Based on the story you just read, how much would you approve or disapprove of the following actions that My Country might take?

Question 3:
If you had known that My Country and Other Country have strong economic ties that affect both populations (many jobs in My Country depend upon good economic relations between the two countries), what would have been your answer to question 1?

[ ] Attack (pre-emptive strike)   [ ] Negotiate further
Question 4:
